

TVET UK – your gateway to the best of
UK vocational education and supplies

Vocational training and qualifications have now become the hottest topic in the world of education; attracting significant investment from governments and industry around the globe. A skilled and motivated workforce is key to staying competitive in today's global market. Employers are increasingly reluctant to spend time and money on training school leavers and university graduates to meet the standards of the workplace, and so are pressuring governments to turn out work-ready youngsters. Effective training and development programmes ensure the right skills for the job at every level; from school leaver to team manager or master craftsman. They will also complement academic training.

When implementing vocational programmes or selecting equipment and supplies, clients look to trusted and experienced professionals for quality provision and effective implementation. The UK has led the world in vocational education and training for hundreds of years, and education and training are two of the UK's biggest exports. British methods and models of delivery, qualifications and products are utilised, recognised and trusted worldwide because they have been developed in conjunction with educationalists and employers. They maintain rigorous quality standards, remain relevant to the ever-changing needs of the modern workplace and ensure economic success.

TVET UK – your gateway to the best of the UK's providers

TVET UK was established in 2007, specifically to enable international customers, including ministries, public/private sector providers and employers, to access the best of UK vocational education and training providers and suppliers easily and effectively through a single point of contact.

TVET UK is a membership organisation representing an extensive network of awarding bodies, professional institutes, UK colleges, training providers, policy making organisations and educational equipment suppliers – each guaranteed to comply with rigorous UK quality standards.

How does TVET UK work?

The team at TVET UK has many years of experience within the sector both in the UK and international markets and offers a personal, user friendly service.

Typically TVET UK looks to bring organisations together in order to facilitate the following types of work for delivery in the UK or in-country:

- policy and curriculum development
- accreditation of existing vocational programmes
- bespoke programmes and qualifications
- introduction of UK qualifications to overseas markets
- sharing best practice
- quality assurance of training
- student/trainer exchange programmes
- train the trainer programmes
- supplier contracts
- tender bids
- student recruitment to the UK.

TVET UK's role is to:

- work with clients to understand their situation and needs
- scope out an agreed approach
- identify suitable TVET UK members to deliver the programme
- effect introductions between clients and suppliers
- ensure customer satisfaction.

Who are TVET UK's clients?

These are organisations outside the UK that are looking for technical and vocational educational and training expertise, products and services. These include:

- ministries of education, labour and trade and industry
- regional administrations
- employers
- non government organisations such as chambers of commerce, federations representing industry sectors and trade bodies
- individual public/private institutions and training providers
- colleges associations and partners
- educational agents seeking to place students in the UK educational system.
