The DELTM Course Team

George Pickering is a well-known educational coach, trainer and consultant who has worked in over 60 countries. In addition to being the academic course director on the English UK DELTM course, George is also a tutor on the International Diploma in Language Teaching Management (IDLTM) run in Barcelona and elsewhere.

He is an inspector of language schools for the Accreditation UK Scheme and was the first director of Bell's Teacher Campus at Homerton College, Cambridge. George is a trustee of IATEFL. He holds a PGCE, an MA in Second Language Learning and Teaching and diplomas in management, coaching and counselling.

Section 1: contact information

1.1. Academic course director

The academic course director is George Pickering. He is responsible for ensuring the quality of the training sessions and of the course resources and will be happy to discuss with you any academic aspects of the course.

George Pickering
georgeuk32@aol.com

1.2. Course administrator

The course administrator is Tom Weatherley, English UK's professional services manager. He is usually your first point of contact with any issues that you may encounter

Tom Weatherley
tom@englishuk.com
020 7608 7962.

1.3. Course manager

The course manager is Huan Japes, English UK's deputy chief executive for professional services. Huan has overall responsibility for the DELTM course and can be contacted if the course administrator or any of the course tutors are unavailable. Huan will be involved in most discussions around the course.

Huan Japes
huan@englishuk.com

1.4. What you can expect from us

We make every effort to ensure that the service we provide:

- Meets the need for provision of a high quality course encompassing both practical and theoretical aspects of ELT management
- Exceeds your expectations
- Enables you to pass the course successfully
- Helps you to improve the quality of your working life
- Helps you to improve the services provided by your organisation.

In terms of the product, we will provide you with:

- Self-study materials – the ten modules provide the essential 'building blocks' of the course
- Intensive training sessions – not only do they provide you with an opportunity to discuss the various concepts and ideas, but they are also very important in enabling you to establish a network of peers with whom you can exchange views, difficulties and suggestions. In all, there are some 75 hours devoted to training sessions and it is crucial that you attend the intensive sessions for successful completion of the course

- Ongoing support – we are available to help you with your studies. If you should feel ‘stuck’ or have difficulty in preparing an assignment, contact us.
- Online or telephone tutorial about your Project Assignment – the academic course director will discuss your progress with you and offer any advice that might be useful.

1.5. What we expect of you

While we can provide you with support, the onus is, of course, on you. It is your responsibility to:

- Read the study materials, completing the exercises and tasks as you go
- Attend all the training sessions
- Read the reference texts as well as any others that you may come across
- Complete your assignments on time
- Communicate, not just with us, but with other members of the course. Networking is often key to success, especially in management roles.
- Participate; management is not an exact science, and your views are just as valid as anybody else’s, so do question and be constructively critical of what you read and hear. Your contributions will always be very welcome.

1.6. Complaints procedure

English UK is committed to providing you with an outstanding educational experience and we take your welfare and satisfaction very seriously. If you have any problems, the primary contacts are the academic course director for academic matters and the course administrator for everything else. Feel free to call or email.

If we the frontline team are unable to assist you, or you don’t want to involve them in your complaint, then contact the course manager who will help you.

Section 2: course validation

2.1. Introduction

The DELTM course has been externally validated by Trinity College London since 2009. English UK has also been a partner with Trinity College London since September 2008 in the development and promotion of the Certificate in International Business English Training (Cert IBET).

2.2. Benefits of validation

Course candidates will benefit from the course being externally validated in a number of ways.

Firstly, the course is formally recognised by bodies such as Accreditation UK and NEAS in Australia which will further improve the standing of the qualification and the employment prospects of successful course participants.

Secondly, course participants will benefit from the additional layer of quality assurance and expertise that TCL provides.

2.3. How will the external validation process affect me?

A course moderator appointed and trained by Trinity College London will sample the course assignments and will double-mark the project. The recommendations of the course tutors will be considered at an end of course moderation meeting and only then will outcomes be formally ratified.

If the participant successfully completes the course they will be awarded with the English UK Diploma in English Language Teaching Management which is produced on an official Trinity College London certification template.

2.4. About Trinity College London

Trinity College London's training qualifications in TESOL have been established for four decades. Trinity qualifications are recognised as professionally sound and well-regulated benchmarks of performance by major employers worldwide.

Trinity pioneered the concept of graded examinations in music in 1877, set its first speech examination in 1918 and now conducts ESOL examinations throughout the world.

Trinity is the only board in the UK to provide learner assessments and higher vocational qualifications across the full range of the communicative and performing arts including TESOL, English language (ESOL) speech, acting, drama, dance and music.

2.5. Contact details

Trinity College London is registered at:

Section 3 - Course Entry Requirements

3.1. Basic course entry requirements

Applicants will normally meet the following requirements:

- Be in a position of line management in an educational or business context, for example (but not exclusively) senior teachers, assistant directors of studies, directors of studies, school directors or principals and similar roles
- Have an initial teaching qualification and at least five years ELT teaching experience
- Evidence demonstrable English language proficiency at an equivalence to level C1 of the Common European Framework (CEFR)
- Be able to access and use course booking data (i.e. course length, duration, type of course) and basic operational financial information. (There is no requirement for access to personal information, and information will be treated in strictest confidence).

3.2. Additional requirements

Candidates will also need to demonstrate or provide:

- Evidence of how the DELTM qualification will be useful in their current employment context
- Contact details for two referees who may comment on your suitability for the course.

Section 4 - Course Details

4.1. Overview of course structure

The course spans ten months from September to June and includes a monthly face-to-face session. Face-to-face sessions last a full day and typically run from 10:30 to 17:00. There are three course requirements that you will need to obtain the English UK Diploma in ELT Management:

- Attendance at the training sessions
- Successful completion of five assignments
- Successful completion of a project assignment

Please note that there is no final examination.

4.2. The course length

The course is comprised of the following:

- 65 face-to-face training session hours over 10 sessions
- 380 hours of self-study including completion of the mini-tasks (approximately eight hours a week over 48 weeks)
- 200 hours of work on assignments (approximately 30 hours on each of the five assignments and 50 hours on the project)
- Total of 635 hours

4.3. Levels of management

The course will focus on three levels of managerial work:

1. Routine level - the day-to-day skills and issues with a short planning horizon. Generally speaking, the routine level will deal with how you operate within your team, your peer group and within the organisation.
2. At the tactical level, we will be looking at the theory that underpins the above skills and at issues which have a one/ two-year frame of reference.
3. At the third level, we shall be investigating strategic issues. This entails the fundamental questioning of what the organisation is doing and considers issues with a three/ five-year time span.

4.4. The self-study modules

Overview

The Modules will provide you with the necessary 'building blocks' and closely follow the syllabus. Whilst we shall try to ensure that we mention all the key concepts, it is of course unlikely that we will cover all of them in this way.

We will be providing suggestions to guide your own reading. As this is a post-graduate course, you will be expected to conduct your own authentic research and to provide evidence of having done so in your assignments and your project.

Function of the Self-Study Modules

These will:

- provide a structure and schedule for the learning process, based on the syllabus
- direct you in your reading of both core and supplementary texts
- provide preparation for and follow-up after the taught elements
- provide research activities related to your own and each others' institutions
- guide you in conducting tasks to broaden your managerial skills
- provide a means for dissemination of information related to the course

They are therefore very much an integral part of the course. The self - study modules will be distributed progressively, rather than all at once, so that they can reflect the needs and requirements of the group. They will normally be distributed at the training sessions.

4.5. The training sessions

The training sessions cover a lot of different ground. This will reflect the topic: human resource management, for example, is such a huge area it would be impossible to cover it all in one day so we will therefore choose some of what we consider to be the most important aspects of it. It will also be a reflection of the fact that we will need to see how things are going, what needs to be covered in more detail and what your concerns are.

In terms of the total number of course hours, the training sessions are relatively short, and we will have to maximise the use of the time available. The training sessions will be designed as far as possible to have their own internal structure which will generally relate to the sequencing of course topics, but not slavishly so.

4.6. Attendance at training sessions

You must attend a minimum of 9 of the 10 face-face sessions in order to successfully complete the course. The following guidelines apply to them:

- attend every session
- be punctual - time is very limited, and we need to maximise our use of it
- switch off mobile phones in sessions
- participate as fully as you can
- be sensitive to turn-taking

If you are unable to attend any of the sessions, please inform the Professional Services Manager either by email or phone. If you are concerned about not managing to meet the attendance criteria, please contact English UK to discuss the situation.

4.7. Course timetable

Registration for each of the training days will begin from 10:00 and light refreshments including tea and coffee will be available. When you arrive, you will need to sign in at reception. There will be an information board to show which room the session is in. Sessions begin at 10:30 and end 17:00.

Section 6: assignments and project

6.1. Assignments: an overview

1. You will receive further details of each assignment and marking criteria as the course progresses. In essence, however, there will be an assignment set for each module except module 10.
2. There are 10 modules in total; assignments 1 and 2 are compulsory with the remaining three being a choice from a selection of topics.
3. The first phase of the DELTM will require the successful completion of five assignments of approximately 3,500 words each. This is a heavy workload and one that you should not underestimate, but on the positive side there is no final examination.
4. The second phase of the DELTM will require the successful completion of a project. The project assignment will be 5,000 words.
5. All of the assignments are of a practical nature, however, there must be a theoretical underpinning evident in your responses to each assignment. The assignments have been designed to put into practice the theory contained in the training sessions and the self-study modules. The end result of the Diploma should therefore be a bank of assignments and a project covering practical aspects of your job.

6.2. Assignments: choice and completion guidelines

Unless indicated otherwise, all candidates will be expected to follow the assignment layout below. A sample of the assignments will be moderated by Trinity College.

6.3. Submitting an assignment

You will submit your assignment using the course Moodle VLE (virtual learning environment). Full instructions on using the Moodle platform will be given on the first day of the course.

- The marker will be the tutor who originally delivered the relevant course module.
- All assignments must be typed
- The subject of the assignment file must be <surname> <DELTM Assignment X> e.g. 'Smith DELTM assignment 3a'
- Assignments should be submitted with a covering page which includes:
 - a. Your name
 - b. The title of the course
 - c. The full assignment title and question
 - d. The designated tutor
 - e. The date of submission
 - f. The word count
- Assignments should be in the form of ONE document and should also include a contents page, a bibliography and any appendices.
- The cover page, contents page, appendices and bibliography do not count towards the final word count but should be restricted to only the most essential of documents.
- If you know that you will have problems submitting an assignment on or before the relevant deadline you must contact English UK and the academic director to alert them and request an extension. Failure to do this puts completion of the assignment, and therefore the DELTM, at risk.

- All assignments sent by the required completion date will normally be marked within three weeks.
- It is very important not to fall behind with assignment completion as it will become very difficult to catch up.

6.4. Assignment layouts

Most of your assignments will require you to use a management report layout. Any exceptions to this format will be highlighted in particular assignment rubrics. A standard management report structure is as follows:

1. Title page, including topic/title; assessor's name, your name; date and word count
2. A contents list of each section, including appendices and bibliography
3. A short 'Executive summary', written in the present tense and third person, e.g.: "this report presents the conclusions arising from the research into customer satisfaction in the name of school and proposes the changes to be made...." The executive summary should include reference to your major findings and/or recommendations.
4. Introduction, stating the aims, the context and the sources accessed (especially people)
5. The main body of the report, using headings and sub-headings. Bear in mind that statements should be based on fact/evidence/other writers rather than on your own unsupported opinions. Statements beginning with words such as 'I feel...'; 'I believe...' etc. are highly suspect, unless you have provided evidence upon which to base your feelings and beliefs! Do use diagrams, charts etc. and ensure you actively apply course concepts in the description / analysis / presentation of the report.
6. Conclusion/recommendations. A conclusion is where you tie together (and possibly summarise) the main points arising, whereas recommendations are the actions that you believe should be taken (based on the theory/evidence of course!). If making recommendations, do be sure to prioritise, establish the constraints/costs, and highlight the benefits to the organization.
7. References, in the format described below.
8. Annexes/Appendices. These are not included within the word count of the assignment, and can be very useful for additional information and/or diagrams, charts etc.

6.5. Writing guidelines

In this course, there are no 'right' or 'wrong' answers to assignments - as you will see, management is about decision-making based on a number of varying factors, so it would be impossible for there to be just one correct answer. Having said that, there are certain conventions, which you should be aware of:

1. For references within the text give the author's name and date of publication, and where possible, the number of the page e.g.:

'On the other hand Stern (1983: 135) argues that....' or

'Competitive strategy is the key to success (Porter 1989: 32) ...'

If you wish to quote from the self-study Module itself, use the format (Mod 6: 12).

2. Add a references section at the end of the assignment. Arrange the references in alphabetical order by author, in the following sequence:

Author (Date) Title, Place, Publisher, , e.g.:

Handy, C. (1993) Understanding Organizations, London: Penguin

3. For journals and other papers, the title of the article has inverted commas, and the title of the journal itself is italicized, e.g.:

Jones, K. (1984) 'Aspects of Learner Strategies', TESOL Review 12/2

For the self-study written modules, use the format:

ENGLISH UK Dip. ELT Management: unpublished: Module 5.

4. Don't copy out long bits of text or plagiarise.
5. Divide your work into 'chunks' using paragraph numbering. Continuous prose may be fine for stories and academic writing, but good business reports need to be structured differently. It makes everything a lot easier if you divide and sub-divide, and it also helps you organise your thinking!
6. Prepare an outline of what you want to say before starting your work - if necessary, you can always change it again, but starting with an outline helps you to organise your thoughts and will save you a lot of time in the long run.

6.6. The mini-tasks

In each Module there will be a series of reflective tasks or mini-tasks which will help you to gain a deeper understanding of the topics. You will be expected to carry out each task and some of them may be discussed at the next training session as a springboard for discussion of certain issues or problems. Completion of these tasks is strongly recommended, although they are not assessed.

6.7. DELTM schedule for submission
 [provisional - any updates will be passed onto candidates for the course]

Tasks	Length	Choice of assignments	Date of sessions	Marker	Deadline
Task 1	3,500 words	1. Organisational Behaviour	09 September 2016	George Pickering	17 October 2016

Project stage	5,000 words	Project assignment	16 June 2017	George Pickering and Trinity College London	26 November 2017

Section 7: assessment

7.1. Basic assessment criteria

Here is a summary of the assessment criteria applied to each body of work submitted.

DELTM Assessment Criteria (2016-2017)

1. Submit the assignment by the agreed date and provide a full response to the assignment topic within the specified word limit

2. Demonstrate the mastery and application of wider management theory and skills and evidence knowledge and understanding of course aims, objectives and syllabus

3. Present clear, coherent and relevant arguments and identify key issues. Demonstrate the ability to prioritise ideas in order of significance and communicate results and findings effectively

4. Select, design, evaluate and apply an appropriate range of tools, material, and research methodologies and illustrate them appropriately

5. Use appropriate mode of presentation, layout, style, grammar and lexis; accurate spelling and punctuation; organise into a coherent piece of text; use key terminology appropriately and accurately; reference sources appropriately

7.2. Detailed Assessment Criteria

The assessment criteria are under discussion and updated information will be sent on as soon as it is available. The 2016-17 course will be validated by Trinity College London, and successful participants will receive a Trinity College London certificate.

7.3. Marking system

The marking system is under discussion and updated information will be sent on as soon as it is available.

7.4. Re-submissions policy

The resubmissions policy is under discussion and updated information will be sent on as soon as it is available.

7.5. Late submission of assignments

The submission of assignments after the deadline is under discussion and updated information will be sent on as soon as it is available.

Section 8: reading list

Section 9: study advice

9.1. Overview

Managers typically lead busy lives with large workloads and varied responsibilities as well as family and social commitments. By taking on this course, you are making a commitment to spending some of your valuable time in reading, researching, discussing and writing about management issues over the next 15 months. We estimate that you will need to spend about 8 hours a week (on average) on the self-study parts of the course. Where will you find that time? How will you balance this new commitment with work, family and social commitments?

Every individual must work out for themselves their own approach to part-time study. All we ask is that you think and plan ahead so that your time is spent well, so that you avoid undue stress resulting from conflicting responsibilities, and so that you do not fall so far behind that catching up looks like an impossible task.

9.2. Plan your time

We recommend that you set aside two hours a day, or all of Sunday or whatever best suits you. We recommend that it is a regular time slot - probably the same time(s) each week so that you, your colleagues, family and friends expect you to be unavailable for other activities. This expectation will help you maintain the momentum of regular weekly study. Share your plan with your family. Help them to understand the commitment you are taking on and reach an agreement on time slots that suit you all. Their support will be crucial in ensuring that your regular study time slots are not interrupted and that there are no other immediate pressures or distractions.

The other dimension to consider when planning time is to ensure that you spend the right amount of time on the different parts of the course. This will vary from individual to individual. For example, you may find that you need to spend more time understanding finance than understanding people management. But don't imagine that because you have been managing people for years that you don't need to study it! You are expected to demonstrate your knowledge of each part of the course in the mini tasks and assignments.

There will be times when - for very good reasons - you cannot stick to your study plan. Nevertheless, having a plan in the first place, and keeping a record of what you have done will help to keep you on top of where you are in the course and where you should be. It will help you plan how to catch up if you do fall behind. It will take the stress out of that feeling of slipping behind.

9.3. Plan the place

It is equally essential you think about where you will study. This may be in a room set aside at home, after-hours in your office or it may be in the local library. If it is at home, and it is almost certain that some of your study will need to be done at home, try to ensure that you have a quiet working area - a desk, or a table that is for you alone, and where you can leave your work undisturbed.

Plan it as a 'comfort' zone - good lighting to avoid eye strain, adequate heating or air-conditioning, quiet, no phone, shelving space, a good chair to avoid back ache, coffee not too far away - or whatever else you need to keep you going!

9.4. Plan the resources

Apart from space and time, you will need to plan some other resources. Self-study modules for each part of the course will be given / sent to you as the course progresses. In addition, you are recommended to buy ring-binders, file dividers, labels and possibly a card box file, stacks of pens, pencils and high-lighters for marking texts. All of this might seem obvious, but it is well worth planning in advance so that you organise your notes and materials as the course progresses, not two weeks before the end of the course!

9.5. Specific study skills

Setting objectives and specific targets:

Each time you settle down to study, be clear about what you want to achieve (rather than what you want to do) by the end of that period. You will learn on the course that objectives should be SMART:

Specific Measurable
Agreed
Realistic and relevant
Time bound

Typical achievement targets for a two-hour study period might be:

Complete the guided reading for Module X or complete the tasks for Section Y or produce a plan (or outline of your answer) for Assignment Z.

Remember the Pareto effect:

The Pareto effect has useful lessons for any number of situations and studying is one of them. You will achieve about 80% of your results (i.e. most of your learning and your assignment or exam marks) from about 20% of your efforts and conversely spend the other 80% of your efforts on achieving the remaining 20% of your marks.

The problem is - which 20% of effort is most worthwhile? Which 80% is least worthwhile? Through experience, and through discussion with your trainers, you will learn to recognise how to achieve the greatest effect from efficient and effective study skills.

9.6. Learning with and from others

We will be providing you with other hints and tips during the course, but the best resource you have is your fellow students:

- How do others manage their studies?
- What can you learn from their good habits that will help you to be more effective and efficient?
- Is there someone on the course who could be your study buddy?
